FSPHP Insights

July 25, 2025

The Call for Presentations for the FSPHP 2026 Education Conference and Annual Membership Meeting - Navigating Change: Challenges, Solutions, and Success will open in early August.

Contributing a presentation is a powerful way to support FSPHP's mission of advancing physician health and well-being through education, collaboration, and shared expertise. Here's how your participation makes a difference:

- Advance the Field: Share insights and innovations that promote the health, well-being, and professional performance of healthcare professionals.
- Collaborate Meaningfully: Work with peers and colleagues to highlight recent developments and foster collective problem-solving.
- Inspire Action: Motivate others to engage in meaningful change and improvement within their programs and communities.
- Refine Your Work: Receive valuable feedback to strengthen your ideas and approaches.
- Grow Professionally: Enhance your presentation and communication skills in a supportive environment.
- Increase Visibility: Showcase your work to a national audience and contribute to broader understanding and impact.
- Build Connections: Expand your professional network and form lasting relationships with others committed to physician health.
- Support Shared Learning: Strengthen collective knowledge and enthusiasm for continued growth across the FSPHP community.

Contribute to the PHP Member Policy Library: Share Your Testing and Toxicology Policies

FSPHP invites all member programs to contribute to the PHP Member Policy Library by sharing your testing and toxicology policies. This growing resource is designed to support collaboration, transparency, and continuous improvement across our community.

By contributing your policies, you help:

- Promote best practices in monitoring and toxicology testing
- Support new and developing PHPs with real-world examples
- Foster consistency and innovation across programs
- Encourage peer learning and policy refinement

Whether your policies are newly developed or time-tested, your contribution adds value to the collective knowledge of our field.

How to Share:

Please email your testing and toxicology policies to ssavage@fsphp.org or reach out with any questions.

Together, we can build a stronger, more informed PHP community.

Call for Content – Fall Issue of Physician Health News

We want to hear from you! FSPHP invites all members to share meaningful stories, innovative practices, and exciting updates from your Physician or Healthcare Professional Programs for inclusion in the next edition of Physician Health News.

Have something impactful to share? We're especially interested in:

- Breakthroughs in peer support or mentorship
- Advocacy efforts that are reshaping state policy
- Creative community-building or educational initiatives
- Research that's driving progress and positive change
- Staff updates and/or shout outs to team members

Whether it's a few sentences, a full story (up to 500 words), or a relevant link—we welcome your contributions! Let's celebrate the passion, progress, and powerful work happening across our FSPHP community!

 17 Submissions for the Fall 2025 issue due: September 5th
