Embracing Inclusivity and Confronting Stigma with Professionals Health Programs' Best Practices

The 2022 FSPHP annual conference will focus on two themes: Inclusivity and Destigmatization for healthcare professionals as we deliver PHP best practices. Presentations will focus on overcoming these barriers, while addressing the evaluation, treatment, and monitoring of illness and conditions relevant to our work. This includes the stigma that accompanies mental health and substance use disorder in healthcare professionals.

Why: National events have drawn our attention to the ubiquitous problems of inclusivity and discrimination. PHPs face their brand of challenges in this arena, from questions around internal/implicit bias to accusations of workplace/systemic discrimination from those referred to PHPs.

Regarding stigma, we see changing trends in how the media and the public view mental health problems of public and private figures. Recent stories include Naomi Osaka withdrawing from the French Open due to mental health problems, Simone Biles opting out of Olympic events because of “the twisties,” and Lorna Breen’s tragic decision to end her life during the pandemic. We ask that you consider how practitioners with mental health problems are perceived by the public, employers, regulators, credentialers, and themselves. How will we work with these often problematic perceptions?

Finally, it is recognized that mental health stigma, bias, and discrimination may be the most important barriers to seeking help and to the well-being of health professionals. Eradicating mental health stigma, bias, and discrimination is a valuable end in itself, but it is also necessary to support cultures of wellness within healthcare that can effectively reduce and respond to burnout and mental health issues among healthcare workers.

Pertinent topics affecting PHP work with healthcare professionals will be explored through the lens of these themes. For example, when discussing substance use disorder (SUD) treatment and monitoring trends, speakers will also address how to best frame testing as a supportive tool, how to reduce the potential humiliations of testing, and how participants and PHPs can effectively address SUD bias and discrimination with administration, colleagues, and others involved.

CONFERENCE OBJECTIVES & SAMPLE TOPICS

Conference Objectives:

1. Review existing evidence-informed strategies that promote cultures of wellness through the assessment and mitigation of mental health stigma, bias, and discrimination in the healthcare ecosystem.
2. Examine policies or practices of PHPs, evaluation and treatment providers, employers, educators, and regulatory or credentialing entities that encourage (or impede) early identification, access to resources, and effective interventions for healthcare professionals at risk of burnout, mental illness, and/or substance use disorders.
3. Describe education and advocacy efforts that use destigmatization strategies to promote health professional wellness, access to support, and effective treatment. Identify best practices for identifying, referring, and monitoring substance use and mental health disorders in healthcare professionals. Such practices include mitigating stigma, internal/implicit bias, and discrimination.

Examples of Topics for Presentations:

- A review of PHP or other organizations' best practices or quality improvement activities that other programs can implement to reduce stigma, bias, and discrimination or promote diversity, equity, and inclusion.
- A review of PHP experiences with complaints of workplace/systemic discrimination from healthcare professional participants or others and recommendations for managing those issues. This could include how PHPs and others are working to elevate participant voices in their work.
- Review and analyze best practices for identifying substance use disorders in healthcare professionals, for providing resources for evidence-based best treatment, and for identifying monitoring or treatment practices that may contribute to stigma.
- Use information on changing public perceptions on mental health problems and treatment to consider changes in how we effectively communicate about PHP programs or services to healthcare professionals and the public.
- Expand upon licensure/credentialing/certifying board rules, regulations, or processes that provide confidential/safe-haven practices (or other mechanisms that create exceptions to mandated reporting or non-reporting) that support privacy for healthcare information while balancing the need for public safety.
